The Intellectual Practice (IP) Program is managed by our Education Ambassador. She shares with us more than 23 years of experience as a certified teacher in the Chicago Public School system, and 12 years as an Operations Manager with the American Bar Association. Her knowledge and expertise, combined with that of our other staff members, is what makes our program stand out among the rest.

IP consists of two programs that focus on (1) Math & Science, and (2) Writing. The overall goal of the programs is to help elementary and high school students develop a love for learning and possibly either a patentable scientific idea and/or a publishable piece of writing upon mastering a specific skillset.

Our writing program provides assistance with grammar, spelling and paragraph structure, while the math & science program is geared towards helping students become innovative thinkers and master arithmetic. Once students finish the program, our researchers at the Jeune Hope Content Group will assess and copyright all qualifying work, so that your child can begin marketing their project.

A portion of the proceeds from the sale of student publications will be held at the Rebecca Everlene Trust Company (RET) to help your child cover the cost of college. All monies will be held in an interest bearing account and your child will have rights to royalties for the sale of their publications for as long as Spaulding & Daniels is in business. If for some reason the company should be dissolved prematurely, students are entitled to receive all of their profits.

IP graduates will be responsible for submitting order forms for books and all associated fees for sales. Upon the sale of materials, RET will credit your child's account, which will grant them shareholder status within the company. The greater the amount of books they sell, the greater their stake in the company. When your child comes of age, they will have the option of leaving the money with RE Trust, applying the funds towards the cost of college or transferring their earnings to a financial institution.

For more information about fees for the program, please send us an email at ask@rebeccaeverlene.org. Initial fees for the programs do not include fees to patent or copyright the final project.

Applications (1) to sign your student up for the IP Program and/or (2) to volunteer your time can be obtained by sending a short email to: ask@rebeccaeverlene.org.

You can also pay for program services by clicking on the PayPal button at www.rebeccaeverlene.org. IP Program students who would like to receive additional copies of book order forms to sell their work, should also send us a short email or just give us a call at: 1.888.854.2290.
